Our Process

For Lanza Vineyards, Sangiovese is a high-yield grape. This varietal loves our Suisun Valley climate for its long warm growing seasons.

Many of our Sangiovese grapes ship to East Coast winemakers-many of them home winemakers. We planted Sangiovese in 2009 but didn't see it in the tasting room until the 2012 vintage. Wooden Valley's Sangiovese is less acidic than the Italian version but has the fruity component that Sangiovese lovers look for, making it a very food-friendly wine!!

This Sangiovese aged for 14 months in a combination of new, one, two, and three-year-old barrels for this wine's desired flavor, nose, and overall profile.

Fun fact...In Italy, Sangiovese is the most widely planted red grape variety. It's the primary grape used in the famous red wines of Tuscany, where it is the solitary grape of Brunello di Montalcino and the primary component of the wines of Chianti, Vino Nobile di Montepulciano, and many "Super Tuscans."

Tasting Notes

This medium-bodied red wine is a beautiful garnet color with tart cherry on the nose to start, followed by subtle nuances of baking spices. Medium acidity and light yet sharp tannins prepare the palate for flavors of cranberry, leather, and earthy truffles.

This Sangiovese will pair well with tomato-based dishes, a variety of cheeses, herbed mushrooms, and of course pizza!
